DETAILED ACTION

This action is in response to Applicant's amendment received on 10 March 2008.

Corrections made have been accepted. It is noted that the prior art applied below was cited in the office action dated 19 September 2007 as considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 66-70, 75, and 76 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Nolting (6,099,559) in view of King et al. (5,192,311). Nolting discloses a stent assembly (see entire document) comprising an expandable tubular stent body (12), a tubular stent cover (22), and cover connectors (18 and 19) disposed at both ends of the stent body bent in an undulate fashion that includes a maxima of an undulation. Nolting disclose the cover connectors are joined to the stent body by fusion, welding, soldering, or any other suitable manner, thus fails to disclose the connectors are integrally formed with the stent body and folded over the first and second ends of the cover.

King discloses a prosthesis (see entire document) comprising a tubular body (mesh material 61) and a cover (22). King teaches that securing the tubular body and cover together comprises folding the ends of the tubular body over the ends of the cover. It is well within the general knowledge of one having ordinary skill in the art to apply a known technique to a known device ready for improvement to yield predictable results. Therefore, it would have been obvious to one having ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to secure Nolting's stent body and cover by integrally forming the connectors with the stent body and folding the connectors over the cover ends as taught by King.

Regarding claim 68, Nolting fails to disclose the stent cover is on the inner surface of the stent body. However, as the applicant failed to provide any criticality for this limitation, one skilled in the art would have found that providing the cover on the inside or outside surface of the stent body to be obvious alternative equivalents as the location of the cover would not affect the performance of the stent assembly.

Regarding claims 75 and 76, Nolting fails to disclose the cover is a rolled up sheet that has edges that substantially abut or overlap. However, as the applicant failed to provide any criticality for these limitations, one skilled in the art would have found that a tube and a rolled up sheet having abutting or overlapping edges to be obvious alternative equivalents as the form of the cover would not affect the performance of the stent assembly.
